'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

For no apparent reason, spring is in our midst out at Thirty-sixth street and McBryde avenue. It arrived yesterday in the form of an iron bat on one of our gardening neighbors. All right, Lloyd, you win—but wait until you see ours.

And for the benefit of embryo gardeners. Those sweet peas that came up as volunteers where you had a row planted last year can be transplanted to where you want them this year. Be sure to take plenty of soil with the roots. We know because we've tried it and it is working.

We're still waiting for some organization to come to the front and offer a prize for the best gardens and lawns in the city. It would be some inducement to our home owners in Richmond. And remember, hundreds of potential citizens will be in our midst soon. A favorable impression with the homes now here will add them in making a favorable choice for Richmond.

And while we are repeating for the benefit of those who have it in their power to correct it. That misleading sign about Richmond's prosperity is still standing forth its message at Esmond and San Pablo avenues. Wonder if something can't be done about it?

Tonight's dinner meeting on the bay barrier will be of interest to citizens of this community. We probably won't have that barrier for a few years, but it might be well to get lined up with the proposal now.

Although it is not in evidence yet, there is going to be very strong opposition to that barrier. Hints of it can be found now in the press of the state.

Various counties of the bay district will set forth their needs as regarding the barrier at the meeting tonight. Talks will be heard on how the barrier will aid this section.

And it won't be long before some of those who have a selfish interest at heart and others who think that they are in the right will begin to oppose the barrier.

Rumors of a marathon race to be held in the early morning hours are prevalent in the vicinity of the Key Route car barns here. Reports have it that two sprinters—not so young as they used to be—started boasting of their running prowess.

Words led to more words and the first thing they knew both of the fleet footed boys had stuck their feet into it.

The race was started in some manner of fashion and the runners sped down MacDonald avenue. Incidentally the race was to be from the car barns to the point, and back—first one faltered—then the other. A kind motorist returned the sprinters to the car barns. But the arguments—they are still going on as though somebody had really been running.

Curtailed Of Oil Production Wins Approval

LONG BEACH, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—State-wide curtailment of oil production was approved here today by Signal Hill operators who appointed a committee to make a survey and apportion ratios.

A resolution, addressed to President Hoover, Congress and the state legislature, was adopted, asking an "adequate" tariff on imported oils.

All but 15 operators in this field were represented at the meeting.

BRITAIN IN FAVOR OF PARITY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—Chairman Hale of the Senate naval affairs committee served notice in a statement tonight that the Stimson-Hoover proposal at the London naval conference "manifestly does not provide for our American naval needs."

Any agreement reached at London, he said, "will be fully threshed out in the Senate."

Hale's statement indicated the American navy desires more of the maximum size 10,000 ton cruisers than the 15 or 18 to be allowed under the American proposal made at London today. The text of his statement follows:

Changes Made

"The Stimson offer involves very radical changes in the position heretofore taken by the navy department and the United States government that our further cruiser demands call for vessels of the maximum tonnage and armament allowed under the Washington treaty.

"If our policy has been the correct one in the past, and if nothing has occurred to change the wisdom of that policy, then the Stimson offer, which contemplates the building of at least eleven six inch gun cruisers at an additional cost over the fifteen cruisers program of at least $25,000,000, while giving us substantial parity in the types of ships allowed, manifestly does not provide for our American naval needs.

Asks Parity

"Should a treaty be negotiated along the lines of the Stimson offer, or indeed should any treaty be negotiated, the whole matter will be fully threshed out on the floor of the Senate and its committees before final action is taken on ratification.

"I realize fully the difficulties that confront the American delegation in London. I have hoped, and still hope, an agreement may be reached that will give us the parity we need."

Arranged before Justice of the Peace Arthur Alstrom yesterday, Tim McDonough, of San Pablo was held to answer to the superior court on a charge of driving while drunk.

McDonough was arrested on the state highway yesterday by State Traffic Officer Charles Nissen. He was taken to the Richmond city jail.

Bail has been set at $500 cash or $1,000 bond.

Activities At Local Harbor

A number of vessels are scheduled to arrive at the local harbor during the next few days, according to an announcement made yesterday.

The Golden Sun, O. and O. line, will dock at the outer harbor this morning to load oils for the Orient. The vessel will leave Sunday night.

Monday morning the Anten of the General line will dock at the outer harbor and the Boston Maru of the J. J. Moore line will dock at the inner harbor. The two ships will load oil for Australia.

The Silver Ash, of the General line will dock at the inner harbor Tuesday to load oil for India.

The dinner will start at 6:30 o'clock.

BAY BARRIER MEET HERE TONIGHT

Tonight's dinner meeting on the bay barrier will be the most important gathering so far held in the current campaign to bring about this improvement, it was indicated in the number of reservations so far made at the chamber of commerce.

The meeting will be a dinner gathering at the Hotel Carmichael at 6:30 o'clock, attended by leading men from this city and the bay shore, and with Bradford Crittenden and members of his joint legislative committee as guests of honor.

Speakers from Contra Costa, Solano, Alameda and San Francisco counties will give voice to the needs of their own districts and show how the construction of the bay barrier would improve conditions and foster progress.

The local representation will be by C. S. Renwick, chairman of the arrangements committee; E. B. Bull, toastmaster; P. M. Sanford, president of the chamber of commerce; Fred D. Farr, chamber leader; Ralph Bergen, director of the chamber, and Mayor A. Paulsen. Bergen will make the principal talk, setting forth the story of Richmond's interest in the movement.

The legislative committee will be met on the bay barrier by a motor caravan of Contra Costa county men led by Sheriff R. R. Veale of Martinez, and escorted to Martinez and Richmond. In this city they will inspect the proposed lower bay site for the barrier and other points of interest.

3 Girls Tell Horror Stories

WOMAN HELD CAPTIVE BY TWO MEN

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—Stories of torture and unhappiness involved three young women in the San Francisco bay region today.

The almost lifeless body of Miss Betty Moran, 19, was found on a street car track in San Jose.

At emergency hospital here Miss Peggy Summers, 25, who desired to be a private detective, sobbed a story of being held captive by men for ten days.

Mrs. Roberta Baldwin, 21, was in the San Francisco city jail, her elopement with Forest D. Clark, 38, halted by police officers.

The plight of Miss Moran was most serious. Her condition was critical.

Police Opens

Authorities held two opinions regarding what happened to her, both based on the presumption that Miss Moran went automobile riding with a man they have not been able to identify.

They believe she was either taken for resisting the advances of her escort and thrown into the street or voluntarily jumped from a speeding automobile to escape him. Her clothes were badly torn.

Attendants at the emergency hospital said Miss Summers was suffering from "chronic alcoholism" but authorities were carefully investigating her story that two men held her in their prison, an apartment. She claimed all her clothing had been taken from her and she had been drugged, police said.

Story Told

The unhappy ending of Mrs. Baldwin's elopement will be told fully in court here next Tuesday. She was arrested in Los Angeles with Clark on complaints of Mrs. Myrtle Clark, mother of three children, and William Baldwin, father of one child.

Mrs. Baldwin, in an interview at the jail, said she was married when she was 15 "and I didn't know what love really was."

When Clark became out next door neighbor and we became friendly, I fell in love with him," she admitted.

17 TAKEN FROM MINE

HELPER, Utah, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—While hastily repaired fans sucked poisonous gases from the explosion wrecked Standard coal mine here tonight, searchers sought more bodies to be placed under sheds with the 17 already found.

The explosion, gathering force as new pockets of gas were ignited, ripped through the drifts and slopes of the mine in the village of Standardville at nine p. m. yesterday. Walls collapsed, timbers flew and through the whole work-flung the deadly pall of gas gradually penetrated. So isolated is the village in the barren hills north-west of here that news of the disaster did not reach the outside world until today.

Twenty-nine men all skilled mechanics engaged in preparing the mine for resumption of regular coal digging, were busy in its depths when the roar of the blast (Continued on Page 8)

YOUNG SLAYER PROVES ENIGMA

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—The puzzle of what to do about Jimmy Ashton, the 11-year-old boy who killed Margaret Pennington, 14, as she sat at the dinner table, still confronted local authorities tonight after a coroner's jury failed to recommend specific action.

The jury merely found that the girl came to her death by a gunshot wound suffered as she and her parents were eating the evening meal at their home in Santa Margarita.

Jimmy admitted that he had stood in his father's hotel and aimed deliberately at the girl, who could be seen through a window of her home. Authorities have been unable to draw a motive from the child, but believe there had been a childish quarrel. Jimmy is held in the detention home here.

PAL TAKEN IN HOLDUP ATTEMPT

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—A police officer who had been placed in a grocery store to prevent a robbery performed his duty here late today. One of the bandits is dying and the other was captured.

The robbers said they had arrived here from Los Angeles Thursday. The one who was wounded said he was Hiller Peters, 22, according to police, and the other gave the name of Thomas J. Mooy, 17.

At a Park emergency hospital, where Peters was taken before being transferred to San Francisco hospital, doctors said his condition was "fair."

Officer Posted

Patrolman Albert Harlow, who has been an officer of the San Francisco department for 17 years described his actions shortly after the shooting. He was posted at the grocery because he feared two men had held up a grocery store.

Two women working in the store, Mrs. Anna Peterson, Elizabeth Koski, were late at the time. There were no customers and I was hiding in back," Harlow said.

Two young fellows came in and the younger one said 'Well, I guess we'll take your money.'

"Stick 'em up," I yelled. "The young fellow turned his revolver toward me but I had drawn a bead on him with my shot gun and fired before he did. I missed and he dropped the revolver."

Aims At Officer

"The older fellow grabbed the revolver and ran about 75 feet from the store. I held my fire because there were lots of people outside and yelled for him to halt. Instead he turned and aimed at me and I fired and wounded him. The other fellow had not run so I arrested him easy."

Harlow is married and has two children. He said he had not received any special rewards since joining the force "but I haven't got any black marks against me either."

Berkeley police exonerated Mrs. McVittie of any blame in the accident which occurred early yesterday afternoon.

A police ambulance took Mrs. Meurs to a Berkeley hospital where it was found that she was suffering from sprains to her back and possible internal injury.

Don't Believe Him Until He Says It

ONCE upon a time there was a girl in an unhappy quandary. Who wondered whether she had only herself to blame, and, in the effort to find out.

Summarized clearly her situation, which, in its essentials, has been that of many other girls.

MARGUERITE MOORE MARSHALL

"And feel that, unless I can make an acquaintance of a friend."

"I would prefer being alone."

"About two years ago, I was in a very depressed state of mind. I did not mingle with people but kept to myself."

"Then I became acquainted with a young man who immediately, as much as I attracted him."

"We became friends instantly, for we saw in each other congenial characteristics."

"We met at every available opportunity. This young man is seven years my senior, and is like me in many respects."

"We have had marvelous times. We have suffered, but stuck together through thick and thin."

"Being a woman, I was most natural for me to fall in love."

"I am perfectly healthy and normal, and in this man."

"I found some one who understood me and my moods."

"Who—or so I thought—possessed something that I had waited for all my life."

"Previous to meeting him, I had lots and lots of friends."

"I went to parties and occupied my time pleasantly."

"But then I fell into my mood of depression because I was fed up."

"On going out and meeting those who thought only of enjoyment."

"There is why I was so happy to meet a man."

"Who seemed, like myself, to take a more serious view of life."

"As time went on and I saw my friend every day, I could not help falling in love with him."

"I became accustomed to him and his ways."

"One day he came to my room and struck me as being coarse, and I tried to correct him."

"Of course, I overlooked much, and did not pick on small things."

"Since I knew that course would bring us both unhappiness."

"For two years I gave up my friends, sacrificed everything and everybody."

"Proved that I would give up my life, if it ever came to that."

"And all I got in return from the young man, at the end of this time, is: 'Evidently you mistake my friendship for love.'"

"Are you not intelligent enough to see the difference?"

"Does a woman realize that, when a man does a woman?"

"He asks her to marry him, and tells her he loves her?"

"What is necessary to know is whether it is necessary for a man always to have these things in his mind?"

"Are not actions sufficient?"

"I have in my possession the most beautiful love letters."

"He used to call me the most endearing names."

"And, declare, at times, that he would go to the ends of the earth for me."

"Does he think I am on his side?"

"Have I been foolish?"

"I don't see how I could have taken anything for granted."

"Precious his actions spoke for themselves."

Seen in the Big City Shops

Lacy Straws

Appropriate for afternoon and the theatre for spring are new hats made of coarse lacy straws. One from Agnes is large in size and fashioned from this sheer yet coarse and lacy straw patterned with chenille dots. A black velvet bow posed at the centre back supplies the only trimming. For dining and dancing a small model of the draped turban type is made from this same medium.

The Worst Jacket

The ubiquitous cardigan now is replaced by the very tailored jacket of bright-colored worsted, cut to define the waistline and with notched lapels. This is shown in bright red, in various shades of blue, and is considered ultra chic for wear over the sleeveless sports frock of white silk crepe.

Sports Beret

Completing the bright-colored woolen jacket and white silk frock is the beret, one of the most popular little hats seen at resorts. This is a knitted model and is just large enough to cover the hair and frame the face suitably.

Jacket Costumes

So ever-present is the short jacket in spring costumes that even the printed crepe frock is completed by a jacket of plain colored crepe. Such a short coat usually is quite nicely tailored and slightly fitted at the waistline, corresponding in detail to the lines of the dress and occasionally having lapels faced with the print to prove that the coat bears kinship to the frock.

Petticoat Blouses

An indication that petticoats will return to vogue is seen in a new model that combines this with a blouse. The two-piece garment looks like a one-piece dress with a fairly straight and neat skirt. The suit skirt is slipped on over this without the usual adjustment necessary with the tuck-in. Such a combination garment is made of washable satin.

Sleeveless Blouses

Pastels and bright shades in silk crepe and shantung fashion very clever sleeveless blouses for wear beneath the spring suit. Some models are precisely tailored, others are frilly and fluffy. These abbreviated blouses may be had in nautarium tones, in blue, green peach eggshell, and in white.

Navy Department Attempts to Save Mayflower From Fate of U. S. S. Oregon or Being Exploited by Excursion Line

WASHINGTON, D. C. The good ship Mayflower, which flew the flag of Presidents, may be saved from the sad fate of cheap exploitation as an excursion steamer.

No bids having been received for the presidential yacht which President Hoover took out of commission, Commodore Ernest Lee Jahncke, the Acting Secretary of the Navy, has an idea about the vessel which commands itself strongly to those who believe the United States Government is rich enough to indulge in a little pride of possession and of principle.

Secretary Jahncke does not wish the Mayflower to become a second U. S. S. Oregon. He is averse to having the presidential yacht plying in a Sunday excursion trade with peanut and popcorn hawkers roaming her decks and soft drink stands cluttering the gangways.

If disposed to some night-boat company, he recalls from the thought of extra fare charges for occupancy of the Presidential stateroom. He is not at all certain there might be designations of the several cabins as those favored by the several Presidents who used the yacht to attract fancy prices.

The Mayflower is to remain at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. It is not probable she may be placed in dry dock for an indefinite period. No further advertisement is to be made for bids. Three times the vessel has been offered for sale. Twice the bids were rejected. The last time there were no bids.

Secretary Jahncke is too much of a practical shipping man to indulge in emotionalism over a mass of wood and steel moulded into a ship. He is of a school which esteems the dignity of the Presidency in every sense of the word and is sensitive to any reflection on that office, irrespective of personalities.

No specific announcement is forthcoming at present as to the ultimate fate of the Mayflower. The disposition seems to be to use her as a training ship at the League Island yard rather than permit her to fall into the hands of some one who might exploit for profit the fact that Presidents and their wives have lived aboard.

The purchase of the yacht for Mayor Walker going to a municipality for public service, such as the City of New York, to replace the Macon. The bid of those supposed to be interested in the purchase of the yacht for Mayor Walker's official welcoming committee was too low to be accepted when bids were opened here in December.

The vessel has been appraised at $100,000. The highest bid for her was by a Florida navigation company, headed by Barron G. Collier, C. Easton Sleep, former secretary to President Coolidge, has been active in trying to obtain the boat for the Collier group, whose highest offer has been $85,000. The Florida company wished to replace a vessel in the Tampa-Nassau trade.

It was understood to-day that one of the points which Secretary Jahncke is insisting is that in the sale of the yacht the name "Mayflower" shall not go with it and that the purchase be required as a condition of the sale to register her under another name.

Secretary of the Navy Adams has contended that could not be done. Commodore Jahncke has been able to demonstrate that he sold several of his own vessels under these conditions, as the vessels linked them directly with his own company. He was selling a physical property, not the good will nor prestige which his family name carried.

Several excursion boat operators who have sought to obtain the Mayflower because of the advertising value of the name and her immediate recognition as the Presidential yacht have run like rabbits when it was suggested that the name would not go with the vessel.

Such incidents have served to convince Acting Secretary Jahncke that anything else that exploitation of the historical significance of the vessel was at the bottom of most of the efforts to obtain her.

The case of the U. S. S. Oregon, which made naval history in the Spanish-American War, is cited as a precedent. The Oregon was rushed to completion in a San Francisco shipyard and sent on a record-smashing trip around Cape Horn to get into the Battle of San Diego. Although not built for speed the Oregon, under command of Capt. George Clark, arrived in time to meet and sink two faster Spanish ships, the Colon and Virago.

Daughters of Capt. Clark now are the wives of Admiral Charles F. Hughes, Chief of Operations, and Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robinson, Superintendent of the United States Naval Academy.

By an act of Congress in 1924, the Oregon was given to the citizens of the City of Portland, Ore. She was stripped at the Bremerton Navy Yard and towed to Portland. At the mouth of the Columbia River a great delegation met the Oregon with Capt. R. F. Manter now is skipper of the U. S. S. Milwaukee.

Tickets had been sold for the final stages of the famous old ship's last cruise. Capt. Manter refused to recognize them. The Oregon was his ship and not a commercial enterprise until he delivered her at Portland. Capt. Manter now is skipper of the U. S. S. Milwaukee.

Navy Department information now is to the effect that the Oregon is dirty and unkempt. She is anchored under the bridge and bears the accumulation of several years of traffic dust. There are peanut and soft drink stands aboard and other concessions devised to raise the revenue required for her maintenance.

To the citizens of Portland that may seem a trifling complaint. To the men who have unbought pride in the American Navy it is little short of a tragedy. They do not wish the Mayflower to meet a like fate or worse to be exploited in any such manner that the memories of Presidents and their wives should be subjected to maudlin vulgarities.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

IT MAY seem to you that some very remarkable things are happening in the world to-day, but they have all happened before, you may be sure of that!

Perhaps Adam and Eve went to the North Pole, or the South Pole, when they were in the Garden of Eden. There is nothing to show that they did not go there.

The oldest records we have tell us of conferences between great peoples, and we are still having them.

What has happened to you has happened to thousands before you, and the experience you think no one ever went through will some day be repeated to you by another as having happened to him.

"There is nothing new under the sun."

ISN'T IT THE TRUTH?

World's Window

Breath of Eternity

That must have been an impressive scene when the Chief Rabbi of Palestine appeared before the British Commission inquiring into the August outbreaks in the Holy Land.

Quoting the sages, the venerable patriarch declared that he had come, notwithstanding the existence of a law which dispenses religious leaders from attending governmental inquiries; besides, he said, the Commissioners merited the honor since even the High Priest of old appeared before the Judges when summoned.

At one moment a quiver ran through the court room as the Rabbi said: "There was once an English King who translated the Hebrew psalms into English, and now in our day, under English administration, brigands have burned the Palm Books at the holiest Jewish place." When some lawyers tried to engage the old man in discussion of Jewish rights to worship at the Walling Wall and the failure of the Rabbinate to present its claims to that place, the Chief Rabbi said that he did not think it necessary to start a technical discussion, because "the whole civilized world knows it is the holiest place to Jews and the greatest receptacle for Jewish tears." And then he said something so simple and so true at the same time that all the false arguments of his opponents broke down: "The spiritual meaning of the Walling Wall cannot be translated into the language of official documents."

Devil's Island

Once again the authorities in France have decided to keep in existence the penal institutions in the South American colony of Guiana. Now and again it is proposed to abolish the institution known as the "bagne," both on economic and humanitarian grounds. The death of seven convicts during the sea journey to the Devil's Island brought the whole question before the public eye. Yet, while admitting that some of the rigors in vogue in the penal institution could be mitigated, the Government decided to leave things as they are. The possibility remains, however, that the system of "de-doubling" may be abolished. At least it will form the subject of an inquiry commission's investigation. "De-doubling" means that a man sentenced to ten years' penal servitude must stay away from France another ten years under a regime of restricted liberty. Those sentenced for a longer term must stay away for life. Several eminent jurists who participated in the debate on abolition thought such a departure hazardous. It has the advantage, they argued, of keeping so many dangerous criminals out of circulation. "We wish to be humanitarian," said one of the spokesmen in the Chamber, "let us think of being humanitarian to the public first."

Disappearing Cafes

"Closing a cafe amounts to the same thing as putting out one of the eyes of a town," Victor Hugo once said. They are closing them by the dozens in France, not only in Paris but also in the provincial towns where the cafe is an institution, a second home to the citizens and even more than that. Clubs, places of gossip, they are also a bit of history—those old cafes in the French towns. What passionate politics have been played in those comfortable interiors, and what figures have passed through them! Then there were the literary cafes and the artistic cafes. They are slowly disappearing. Once upon a time a man could sit on the terrace of a boulevard cafe and order pen and ink with his "petit verre" and sit for hours attending to his correspondence while watching the world go by. Nowadays the waiters frown if an old-timer ventures to come in. They like better to see the tourist or the stranger who gulps down his "cafe creme," leaves a large tip and is off again in search of new scenery. The old Parisians don't feel comfortable any longer in their favorite haunts. They are being driven out and the cafes are slowly being "trustified" with the same standardized glass and quality of consumption being introduced everywhere from Montparnasse to the Butte.

A Twine Holder

THE ball of twine has such a habit of not being in sight when needed, that a twine holder is really a household necessity. Here is how you can make one that will not cost you a cent.

Cut two strips from the old inner tube. Stretch these at right angles over the twine and tack the ends down on the shelf or table where the twine will be handy for use. That is all there is to it.

Being elastic the holder need merely be stretched to remove or replace the twine, and the size of the holder may be adjusted to suit the size of the ball necessary by retacking. If heavy thumbtacks are used, this will be a simple matter.

DRAMA, PATHOS IN 'OH YEAH' DELIGHT

Delicious humor, heart touching pathos and nerve tingling thrills combine to make 'Oh Yeah,' Pathe's all dialogue production which will be shown today at the Fox-California theater one of the most completely satisfying screen entertainments ever presented at this popular theater.

Bringing together on the screen for the first time Robert Armstrong and James Gleason, the team that scored such a tremendous international success on the stage in 'Is Zat So!' the picture proves a worthy successor to that great triumph. It is replete with laughs and moves along swiftly to a dramatic climax that is breath-taking.

'Oh Yeah,' directed by Ray Garne, is the story of two railroad brakemen who have the wanderlust and work wherever there is a railroad, but not for long. They never can stay put. That is, they can't anchor until they land in Linda, a railroad camp, and develop two perfectly good heart-romances. The love affairs of these two hardboiled roustabouts is one series of rib-tickling occurrences.

Dude, played by Armstrong, is accused of attacking and robbing one of the other brakemen. The story takes a serious turn and develops a strong dramatic situation. Pinkie, in love with Dude, throws him over. He is ordered to leave camp. Dusty joins him loyally. There is a runaway train and being railroaders first and last, Dude and Dusty take their lives in their hands to prevent a wreck. The train winds up in a terrific crash against a stone quarry and the pair, somewhat battered, are returned to their affairs of amour when an ugly situation is cleared up and the real perpetrators of the crime are exposed.

Patricia Caron, as Pinkie, is one of the most beautiful girls who has come to the screen. Zasu Pitts, who plays the Elk, a waitress who falls in love with Dude, adds her pathetic comedy personality to the story with fine effectiveness. The rest of the cast is well selected and give a good account of themselves. They include Paul Hurst, Frank Hagney and Bud Fine.

Olive Borden Turns Blonde For New Show

Olive Borden, noted for her curly blue-black hair, turns blonde for the first time in her screen career in 'Dance Hall,' all talking drama which opens tomorrow at the Fox-California theater. Portraying the role created in the original story by Vina Delmar as a little dance hall hostess, Miss Borden is most captivating and proves as attractive with golden tresses as with dark hair.

California has the lowest spot in the world—Death valley—310 feet below sea-level.

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

ALUMNI GROUP TO MEET AT ST. MARY'S

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE, Feb. 7.—Saint Mary's college will be host to the official representatives of over 75,000 graduates of colleges and universities in Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and California, when the convention of District IX of the American Alumni Council meets on the college campus tomorrow.

One feature of the extensive program outlined by Timothy J. Canby, executive secretary of the Saint Mary's Alumni association and head of District IX is a sightseeing tour of some of the beauty spots of Contra Costa county. Weather permitting, nearly one hundred delegates will take an auto trip to the top of Mount Diablo and visit other scenic sections of the county.

Oscar Olsson, county supervisor will be the official representative of Contra Costa and will be a featured speaker at the luncheon of the convention. Sheriff R. R. Veale and other prominent county officials are expected to be present at the gathering to form an official welcoming committee for Contra Costa.

Third Meeting

This is the third important educational convention which Saint Mary's has brought to Contra Costa since moving here more than a year ago. The first was a meeting of Spanish teachers in high schools and colleges in central California, the second a philosophic gathering which took place last August and which drew a large crowd of representatives from the faculties of nearby colleges and universities.

Coming from recent meetings of district units of the American Alumni Council in Denver and Spokane, Fred Ellsworth of the University of Kansas arrived in Oakland to preside at the convention. Ellsworth is supervisor of all the district conferences of the American Alumni council, and his duties make it necessary for him to travel over the greater part of the United States to preside at various sectional gatherings of the alumni.

Many Speakers

The convention brings together a galaxy of noted speakers and authorities on educational matters among whom are: Robert Sibley of the University of California; J. E. McDowell of Stanford University; Frank Hadlock of the University of Southern California; Miss Elizabeth E. Snell of Stanford University; Frank Hadlock of the University of California and Dr. Leon Richardson, president of the California Alumni association.

University seniors will be represented at the dinner which will close the convention when they give a series of four-minute talks on "Why I Plan to Join the Alumni Association." John B. Reynolds, president of the Associated Students of the University of California, F. McClintock of Stanford University and John Fitzgerald of St. Mary's college will represent student delegates from Mills college and the University of Southern California will also speak.

College graduates of many years standing will attend kindergarten sessions at the convention. Delegates from all the larger universities and colleges in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho and Nevada will be initiated into the intricacies of managing alumni problems under the direction of Frank Hadlock, executive secretary of the University of Southern California Alumni association for some years. He has been instrumental in establishing many Trojan clubs in various cities throughout the country and has engaged in practically all types of endeavor to keep the alumni in close harmony with the university.

At present Hadlock is busy with extensive plans for a gigantic celebration in Los Angeles which will commemorate the golden jubilee of the founding of the southern university.

Directors Of Taxpayers Group Hold, Meet Here

A report on the activities of the local Taxpayers' unit was given at a session of the directors of the Contra Costa county unit of the California Taxpayers' association in the Hotel Carquinez yesterday. J. B. McFarland gave the report. The meeting was under the direction of E. L. De Laveaux. Directors present were: E. B. Bull, E. M. Downer, F. S. Newsom and F. W. Vieth.

El Cerrito Lions Discuss Plans For Delivery Of Mail

Mail delivery from the El Cerrito postoffice was discussed yesterday by the El Cerrito Lions club.

At present the rural route which serves a number of residents of El Cerrito, runs out of the Berkeley postoffice and is the cause for a great deal of confusion in mail delivery and addresses. There is also a route, known as a mounted delivery route, which serves residents of the hill section and some of the lower sections of the city, also being run out of the Berkeley office, which also causes some confusion.

Members of the Lions club have interested themselves in providing the city with an adequate mail delivery system. Members are optimistic that a change can be made.

REALTORS PLAN COMMITTEE ON CONDUCT

Formation of a committee on professional conduct was authorized by the board of directors of the California Real Estate association in session last week at Los Angeles upon recommendation of W. T. B. Campbell, chairman of a committee on selling methods.

The advisory council plan was discussed at a preliminary session of the executive council, and J. Bradley Clayton, retiring president was appointed chairman of the committee. The suggestion of Stephen Barnson, commissioner, that a special contact body be formed to work with the State real estate department, was accepted, and appointment authorized. The proposed amendment is still in preparation.

The budget and the educational program were endorsed, and it was voted to hold the next meeting at Yosemite in May.

A thousand people, realtors, title men, state and civic officials, business men and citizens, witnessed the inauguration of W. H. Daum as president of the State association following the directors' meeting.

A miniature city of Los Angeles with its deep water harbor, industrial, residential and business sections, was on the speakers' table. Made in honor of the new president it was planned by the women's division, whose committee, headed by Josephine Then, had charge of the decorations.

WANT ADS GET RESULTS IN THE RECORD-HERALD

local physicians. Gleason said he had requested civil health authorities to sanction removal of Mrs. Sevier's body from the vault and that a coroner's jury would view it as a preliminary to an inquest and that later potest surgeons would perform an autopsy.

Mrs. Sevier was married in November, 1926, and came to the Islands with Col. Sevier in October, 1927. She became socially prominent but suffered illness during her residence here, being in the Tripler General Army hospital on three occasions. The last time she entered was in July, 1928, and death followed in less than two months.

Orders Sensational

Mrs. Sevier died at 1 a. m., Aug. 27, 1928. Funeral services were held the following afternoon. Ralph Shainwald, arriving in the Islands shortly after his sister's death, expressed dissatisfaction with the death certificate and asked for a local and war department investigation. Succeeding in having the unofficial autopsy performed last spring.

The order of Sheriff Gleason to conduct an inquest proved a sensation here because of the prominence of the persons involved. Mrs. Sevier came from a wealthy and well known New York family, being the principal heiress to the estate left by Mrs. Riette H. Shainwald who died in New York on Aug. 30, 1925.

There was much speculation as to probable results of the second autopsy, which Sheriff Gleason says will be performed. The first one was without result, due to the absence of vital organs, although a study of the woman's medical history indicated that the clinical diagnosis here was partially in error.

Was 39

Mrs. Sevier was 39 when she died and it had been assumed then that she had been aging prior to her arrival here. Her death certificate mentioned several ailments, the chief one being arterio sclerosis.

William Borthwick prominent funeral director, declared today that Shainwald must have known that the viscera had been removed from his sister's body long before the autopsy last spring. He said this action was necessary because it was a "rush job" and that he told an attorney representing Shainwald that vitals of the body had been removed in embalming.

The second autopsy was recommended by Dr. Nils P. Larsen, head of Queens hospital here, and Major W. C. Whitmore, medical officer at the hospital where Mrs. Sevier died. Both were prompted by a desire, they said, to clear the mysterious angle of death.

Tells History

A letter from Major Whitmore to Gleason said: "I am writing at the request of Mr. Ralph Shainwald, whose sister, Marion Sevier, I treated during her last hospitalization."

"I was then chief of the medical service of Tripler General hospital, Fort Shafter. Marion Sevier was suffering from chronic interstitial nephritis and enlarged heart."

"Her history showed an attack of scarlet fever as a young girl, and I was led to believe that her health had been failing gradually for many years and that the chronic interstitial nephritis was the direct result of early scarlet fever."

Report Made

"My diagnosis was therefore,

based on those assumptions. "A further study of the case elicits two facts which prove conclusively that the early scarlet fever could not have been the cause of her chronic interstitial nephritis."

"First, several competent physicians who examined Marion Sevier within an eight year period preceding her death affirm definitely the absence of chronic interstitial nephritis and heart disease. "Second, microscopic study of tissues taken at the autopsy show clearly that she did not have generalized arterio sclerosis, which is my opinion she undoubtedly would have had if the early scarlet fever had been the cause of her chronic interstitial nephritis."

Inquest Asked

"I was not in possession of the above facts until recently, and since they tend to throw a different light on the case, I believe that a coroner's inquest should be held to determine as accurately as possible the cause which induced in a comparatively young woman, chronic interstitial nephritis and rapid enlargement of the heart."

Dr. Larsen's letter, in part, to Gleason said: "There are many factors in the case of Marion Sevier which vary from the usual course of nephritis of natural origin. The variations might be explained on the theory that the nephritis was brought on by the slow administration of X X X X X. Some of the facts are very striking, and I believe a coroner's inquest should be held."

"Although the stomach and kidney has been removed by someone, the uterus is still in the body. Recent studies suggest that the uterus is an organ which eliminates X X X X X in the case of lower animals, and it probably so acts in the case of human beings. But in addition to the uterus there are other parts not yet removed which might help clarify the case."

"The autopsy showed that generalized arterio sclerosis was absent."

Another letter from Dr. Larsen to Gleason, written October 21, 1929, said:

Hard Study

"Mr. Ralph Shainwald has asked me to write to you, supplementing his request that you hold an inquest over the body of his sister, Marion Sevier, and take charge of the remains until our studies are completed."

"Since the vital organs have been removed prior to the post mortem examination which I attended, the study is unusually difficult and prolonged."

"Various facts and circumstances in this case are highly suspicious and point to the possibility of foul play; it would therefore seem that every possibility should be tried to clear or prove suspicion."

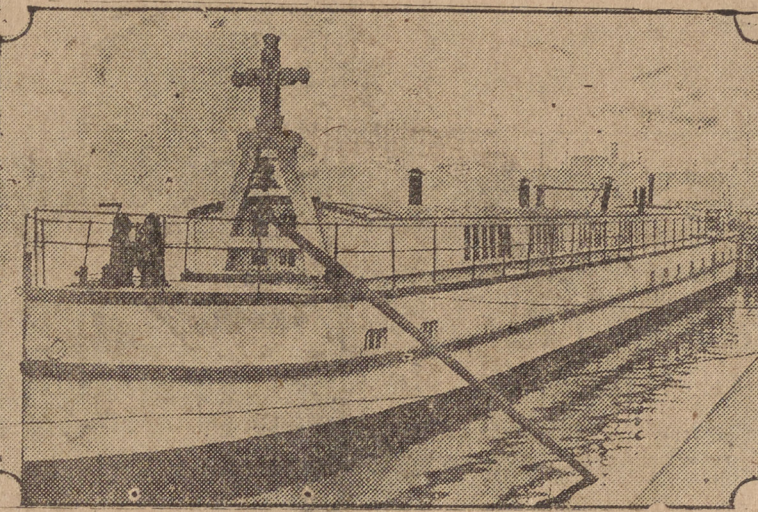

Realtor Installed National Director

Robert Baker, prominent Los Angeles realtor, director at large of the California Real Estate association and state treasurer last year, was installed as a director of the National Association of Real Estate boards for a three-year term at the Phoenix midwinter meeting.

Baker's name was omitted from a list issued last week of Californians inducted into national office.

INDUSTRY AND THE BAY BARRIER

Richmond, because of its industrial nature, has a big stake in the proposed bay barrier.

On Saturday evening of this week the Richmond Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a bay barrier dinner meeting at which the members of the joint legislative committee will hear the full story of this city's interest.

Every Richmond business man and every member of the Chamber of Commerce should attend this meeting. If you are unable to secure a seat at the dinner, come in after 7:30 at which time some rearrangement of seats will be carried out to permit the largest possible number to hear the speaking program.

Richmond's future is bound up with conservation of water and development of the back country, and the bay barrier has a bearing on both these factors.

Richmond is Industry's Western Goal. Here, in future years, will be many new and large industries that will increase our population and enrich our citizens. We must take a deep and lasting interest in the bay barrier. Show your own interest by attending Saturday night's meeting.

The shocks were felt in San Diego and across the International boundary line at the Agua Caliente, Mex. race track. Few persons in the stands noticed the tremors, which were felt more easily in the press box on the roof.

The tremors were recorded by the seismograph at the Theosophical Institute here and were graded between classes one and two, which are minor. The initial tremor was of 15 seconds, the second of 12 seconds and the last of 18 seconds.

It was believed the shocks were stronger here than in Agua Caliente because of the type of the fault in a mountain range to the east of this city. The shocks were as strong as one felt about a month ago.

All Star Five, Huttons Will Play Tonight

The Richmond All-Star city league quintet is determined to give the cagers of the H. C. Hutton financial firm of Oakland their money's worth in opposition in tonight's contest at the Richmond Union high school gymnasium.

Although defeated 33 to 40 Thursday night by the Martinez Native Sons, the local All-Stars have played fast basketball during their first week in existence. They illustrated their superiority on the offensive Tuesday night by defeating the Crockett team 48 to 23.

Thursday's lapse was probably due to fatigue on the part of the locals because of their battle of the previous evening.

Richmond will have to be at its highest playing standard tonight, if they expect to withstand the well-known attack of the Hutton boys. Hutton's aggregation is possessor of the Oakland Industrial league title, and has demolished the aspirations to victory of many teams of the eastbay.

If Richmond cagers can send the Huttons back to Oakland defeated tonight Richmond may be regarded as having a team par excellence.

A preliminary will be provided tonight by the Richmond All-Star 145's of the City League and the Richmond Y. M. I. Richmond lightweights have won every one of this week's games, and their clash with the Y. M. I., also a speedy outfit, should be a hard-fought game.

The lightweights will meet at 9 o'clock.

For Rent—Rooms, Homes, Apartments, Flats, Liver, Gall-Bladder and Stomach Trouble Relieved

2946 Morgan Ave. Oakland, Cal. Nov. 19, 1929.

THE FONG WAN HERB CO.

I am writing this letter to express my gratitude for the splendid results and benefits I have received from the use of the Chinese Herbs prepared by you.

I had a complication of Liver, Gall-Bladder and Stomach trouble. With each sharp, stabbing pain in the lower right side of my abdomen. The region of the Liver was exceedingly sore and tender, so much so that even loose clothing became irritating and uncomfortable. My Stomach was also very sore to the touch and felt as if there were a lump the size of an egg in it. After meals, food which was very sour and burned the throat, was returned to the mouth. This condition steadily became worse over a period of a year. During this time, I was treated by two doctors without any appreciable results. Both decided that an operation was necessary. By good fortune, I came into contact with a man whom you had treated successfully for an Ulcerated Stomach, and he strongly urged me to take your treatment. This I did.

Results were noticeable the very first week, and now, after six weeks, I am entirely free from the terrible stabbing pains and the soreness over my Liver. My digestion is good. The old feeling of lassitude has completely disappeared and I feel much brighter and more energetic than I have for years.

I am most happy to strongly recommend the herbs of the Fong Wan Herb Co. as prepared by you. Wishing you unbounded success, and again thanking you for what you have done for me, I am Very cordially yours,

CYRIL MAW.

"GENERAL CRACK"
BY GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1928 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.
The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS
General Crack, soldier of fortune, has routed the enemy and prepares to crown King Leopold emperor. He is heartbroken to learn that his wife has deceived him—Princess Eleanora, whom Leopold yielded to Crack, the latter's price for siding with him in the war. Crack had to leave his wife for the campaign one hour after the marriage. Crack vows vengeance on Leopold for having forced Eleanora from the path of virtue. He causes Gaborn, the informer of the evil news, to be hanged and shot, with Leopold a reluctant witness.

"I owe everything to you!" said Leopold, like an automaton. "At the Diet you shall hear my formal thanks, and receive my formal reward." He thought, as they clattered through streets: "I shall have to give him Kurland—I promised Kurland," and perhaps another province too. And then he will be independent of me."

They reached the Palace, which sparkled with many lights through the thickening snowstorm; for, though it was yet early in the day, an increasing darkness had overspread the city.

The Emperor dismounted, with two princes at his stirrups, and entered the house followed by all the cavalcade. There was to be a banquet, and some punctilious rejoicing.

All took off their outer attire—all save Christian, who remained not face them, his hat under his arm, his cloak hanging by the side of his shoulders, all decked and marked with snow, fading into wet.

Leopold turned slowly until his back was to the mirror; but he did not face them, his glance was downward. He was, however, acutely aware that Christian had stepped into the middle of the room, and he heard him say, softly, in a voice quite expressionless:

"Sire, it is understood that I have fulfilled my compact."

Leopold did not answer to this challenge and there was a murmur of surprise from the other men.

Prince Christian continued to address the Emperor.

"I undertook to serve in this campaign," he said, "to take the command of your forces, Sire, and to crown you at Frankfurt, besides bringing the war to some manner of halt with the Allies. This has been done. Yesterday an armistice was signed; today you were crowned."

"I have disputed none of this," murmured Leopold, temperately, "nor my obligation to you."

Christian glanced indifferently round the faces of the other men, who watched him in such an amazed curiosity; they were nothing to him, but the witnesses of his official action.

"Then, gentlemen, you see me absolved from further service. My employment is at an end."

Leopold kept his glance downward; Marshal de Saxe spoke again, still with eagerness and a certain distress.

"You speak as if you put down your command, Prince; but that seems scarcely possible!"

"It is what I do, Monseigneur," said Christian. "But first I would have an admission that I have accomplished what I undertook."

Receiving no reply from Leopold, he looked at Hensdorff, and Hensdorff replied:

"It is true that you have done all that you undertook to do, and perfectly put through your part."

"Well, then, I am free of it, Monseigneur," responded Christian; "and that is all I have to say."

"You leave us, then?" cried de Lisie, ruefully.

Christian glanced at him, and beyond him at the curious and disturbed Electors and Princes, all beginning to ponder their own interests.

"We are in carnival here," he smiled; "this is a festival. Let us put up our masks, that there be no scandal to mar these rejoicings! Messieurs, if we meet again, it will be with salutation, whichever side we separately serve."

Hensdorff had now gone up to Leopold, and said, with clear insistence:

"Has Your Majesty nothing to say to him?"

Leopold looked up, and said with painful difficulty:

"What should I have to say to him? It seems he lays his charges down without any permission of mine! Would you have me try to stay him?"

"Nothing could stay me!" remarked Christian. "I only pause to know you hold me absolved of all my oaths."

"Where will you go?" demanded Hensdorff, "and whom will you serve?"

"To that last replied Christian: "No one; I am again my own master."

He took off his collar of diamonds and laid it on the little light table by Leopold; then unfastened and placed beside it the other crosses, jewels and honours that he had received from the hands of the Emperor; as he shifted his cloak they all remarked that he no longer wore the imperial uniform, but that of his own Uhlan's.

"I have no desire for these," he remarked. "If I have need of them again, I will take them from the hands of another man."

He stood now quite close to Leopold, who looked at him for the first time, hardly able to forbear shrinking before that potent presence, and spoke, quietly and levelly, yet under his breath, as if he had not the power to raise his voice:

"Do you rebel against me?" he asked. "Do you defy me?"

"Neither," said Christian. "You never have been any master of mine."

At this, there was a little movement among the other men, and one or two of them put their hands to their swordblights; but Leopold made a gesture that held them still; though deeply curious.

"No subject of yours; no servant of yours!" added Christian. "Take back your trifling rewards. I am not here to destroy your festival."

Leopold put his hand to his bosom; this was intolerable, could not be further hushed up. . . .

"Twenty times since you began to speak," he murmured, "my heart has failed me to say what I have to say."

"I leave you," smiled Christian. "At the mercy of those unspoken words."

Into a second's pause came Hensdorff's old, thin voice:

"You have defied me, on the verge of the inevitable gifts of your estates and glories!"

"I have kept my word," replied Christian, with sudden sternness. "and now you must hire another man to lead your party fortunes to their wretched triumph."

"But this is insupportable!" murmured Leopold. "Not thus can we come to conclusions."

"Not thus do we come to any conclusions," cried Christian, turning upon him with sudden ferocity. "We shall meet again and come to our conclusions, you sick, paltering boy!"

"Take that back," gasped Leopold. "I've some power yet—"

"Make it no quarrel here!" cried Hensdorff, stepping between them, while the others, amazed and disordered, looked on at the words addressed to Leopold, yet relished as the keen truth. "Make it no quarrel here, Prince Christian—nor you, Sire. As you yourself say, the issue and the conclusion must be in another place."

"Where," asked Leopold, steadily, "shall that other place be, if not here and now?"

"No particular spot on earth," replied Christian. "Anywhere where you and I meet together alone and unhampered."

"He defies him! He insults him!" smiled the Prince of Wurtemberg. And the Elector of Saxony added, sucking his thick lips: "He insults the Emperor!"

Christian turned to them immediately.

"Take up that challenge when and how you will," he said. "I ask no followers and no support! I can deal, Messieurs, with your censure and your displeasure as I have dealt with your support and with your applause—in complete indifference!"

"You talk rebellion, Monseigneur," retorted the Elector, hotly, "and cannot be suffered so to depart; who knows what trouble you may cause in the Empire?"

"For nothing am I answerable to you, Monseigneur," replied Christian. "Say—no longer, now, to any man! Cross not my constancy further, but let us make an end of these peevish quarrellings and womanish railings! Monseigneur, let me pass."

CONDITION OF TAFT HELD BETTER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—UP—William Howard Taft, former president and chief justice, showed such improvement tonight that one of his physicians for the first time expressed hope that he would recover.

Dr. Thomas A. Clayton, after examining the 72-year-old patient said informally:

"It begins to look as though he might get up and be about again after awhile."

The night bulletin, issued by Dr. Clayton and Dr. Francis R. Hagner, at 7 p. m. said:

Comfortable Day

"He had a very comfortable day and is showing encouraging improvement."

The officials' bulletin was far more optimistic than any issued since the chief justice resigned Monday and news of his serious condition became known.

The day bulletin issued by the two doctors said:

"The chief justice continues to improve. He is taking nourishment and is comfortable."

Said Better

Dr. Hagner after the night call said:

"Mr. Taft is very much better tonight than at any time since he returned from Asheville."

The reports were taken to indicate that the rest and sleep which Taft has obtained in the last two days have enabled him to overcome the hardening of the arteries, which with other ailments threatened his life Tuesday.

Dewey Camp To Visit Schools Here Wednesday

As part of the program to cooperate with the Allied Veterans' council in observance of Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Admiral Dewey camp, United Spanish War Veterans, will visit the junior high schools of Richmond next week.

This was decided at a meeting of the camp in Memorial hall last night. Thomas Nee, commander of the camp presided.

Reports from delegates to the Varsity Council of War Veterans were made last night.

The vicinity council is composed of delegates from all camps of the eastbay, and meets once a month.

In tribute to the memory of the late Dr. Charles Crawford, the camp has draped its charter for 30 days.

Dr. Crawford has been an active member of the local camp for two years, and friends and comrades of the order deeply regret his passing.

parity that our country demands and at the same time will recognize our American needs."

Hale is characterized by his opponents here as the Senatorial spokesman for the big navy group.

It was recalled today that he discouraged the suggestion that William B. Shearer's lobbying activities at the 1927 Geneva naval conference be investigated by the Senate.

BRITAIN FAVORS

PARITY WITH U. S.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Great Britain announced acceptance today of early naval parity with the United States and proposed a limitation schedule even more detailed than that suggested by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson last night.

The British government issued a formal memorandum of its naval views, in which is proposed among other things:

Scraping of three American battleships and five British.

Acceptance of 339,000 tons of cruisers, as proposed by Stimson.

A battleship building holiday until 1935.

Reduction of battleship sizes.

Eventual abolition of battleships.

Expiration in 1936 of any treaty signed here, with a further naval conference in 1935 and still others at regular periods thereafter.

Reduce Ships

A British (and American) destroyer fleet of 200,000 tons, or less if submarines are reduced radically.

Agreement with the United States that submarines should be abolished, or at least reduced, and that the Root treaty restricting wartime use of subs almost to the vanishing point should be revised.

Reduction of total tonnage, size and armaments of airplane carriers.

The British memorandum was issued at St. James' palace. The spokesman issuing it told newspapermen:

Present Views

"If you compare this memorandum with Stimson's statement you will have an idea how Britain feels toward the latter." He said the memorandum represented the views of the government after discussions with the dominions.

The British and American positions as now set forth compare as follows:

Battleships

American—Scraping of two more British battleships than American, to achieve actual parity in 1931 instead of 1942 as previously planned.

British—Scraping of five British and three American battleships, to achieve actual parity 18 months after the treaty to be signed here is ratified. No battleship replacements before 1935.

Meantime, negotiations on the whole question of battleships, Britain favoring a maximum capital ship size of 25,000 tons, maximum armaments of 12 inch guns and a 26 year age limit, compared with 35,000 tons, 16 inch guns and 20 years set by the Washington treaty.

Cruisers

American proposal—U. S. to have 180,000 tons of 10,000 ton cruisers with 8 inch guns and 147,000 tons of smaller cruisers with 6 inch guns. Britain to have 150,000 tons of the larger cruisers and 139,000 tons of the smaller. Each nation, however, could exactly duplicate the other's strength if so desiring.

British proposal—Assumes a total British cruiser strength of 339,000 tons as Stimson suggested, divided among 50 cruisers; that is, 15 large cruisers and 35 averaging 5400 tons each.

Limit Cruisers

Proposes limiting cruisers to 10,000 tons, and smaller cruisers to 6000 or 7000 tons.

Further, the British propose limiting the proportion of smaller cruisers that could reach 6000 or 7000 tons.

Still further, the British would establish a 20 year age limit for cruisers and would permit a fixed percentage of tonnage transfer from the large cruiser class to the small.

Airplane Carriers

American proposal—Parity with Britain.

British proposal—Reduce British and American aircraft carrier strength from 135,000 tons as in the Washington treaty, to 100,000 tons.

Reduce the maximum size of aircraft carriers from 27,000 tons.

Destroyers

American proposal—Parity with Britain.

British proposal—A program of 200,000 tons of destroyers, but this could be reduced provided the submarine programs of other powers were cut.

Submarines

American proposal—Abolish them. If unable to do so, reduce them as low as possible. Restrict their use in war time so that they must save the passengers and crew before sinking a merchant vessel.

British proposal—The same.

Auxiliary Vessels

American proposal—None.

British proposal—Auxiliary vessels not strictly entering into fleet strength (such as mine sweepers and small service vessels) should be specified, with each government publishing yearly a list of vessels laid down in this class.

The British propose five classes of warships: Capital ships or battleships; aircraft carriers; cruisers; destroyers; submarines. They oppose any transfer of tonnage from one class to another in the case of capital ships, aircraft carriers and submarines.

JAPAN OPPOSED TO MERICAN PLAN

TOKIO, Feb. 7.—UP—The American suggestions to the London naval conference met with strongly voiced opposition in official circles here today.

Japan will not abandon her 70 percent demand, nor accept a compromise involving lesser strength in her navy an official spokesman told the United Press. This attitude is not expected to change after the general elections Feb. 20.

Secretary Stimson's announcement represents the final Anglo-American attitude, the spokesman said, "then we feel the conference will fail."

The government following receipt of the American proposals has been giving them the most careful consideration. However no additional instructions as yet have been sent to Reijiro Wakatsuki, chief of Japan's delegation at London.

"Japan is willing to consider the eventual total abolition of battleships," the spokesman said. "Japan certainly will oppose any agreement involving the construction of additional capital ships."

The spokesman said reports that the government intended to delay a reply to Stimson's proposals until after the general election was "absurd."

"No party in Japan," he said, "would dare make the conference

Guy Colvin At Rotary Meeting

"Effect of the Stock Market on Business" was the subject of an address delivered before the Richmond Rotary club yesterday by Guy Colvin, San Francisco investment broker.

Colvin predicted that the business depression that followed the stock market crash of a few months ago, has reached "bottom." He believes that the year 1930 will be a good year for business.

Carl Bierbauer, manager of the Hercules Powder company of Pinole, was the chairman of the day.

Issue one of internal politics. Our position always has been clear. We cannot see any possibility of a change.

The press generally considers the American plan to grant Japan between 60 and 70 percent ratio in auxiliaries as not acceptable.

MORTEMOTH
KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

BODIES TAKEN FROM MINE IN BLAST

informed their families of the tragedy.

Four Escaped

Four smoke blackened men staggered out of the gas belching mouth of the mine soon after the explosion. Grief-stricken women and children hurried to the shaft while mechanics rapidly improvised a ventilating system. Hardly had the fans started to remove the death laden gas than rescuers piled down into the debris-strewn mine. One by one they brought up 17 bodies and they came upon a small room where they found alive four men who had barricaded themselves against the gas.

Search continued in the rapidly vanishing hope that others also might have escaped. As hours passed with no further word of rescues, it was feared that the three others would be found dead, deep in some gas laden pocket of the workings.

Nine Rescued

A pall of smoke and dust filtered down on the sobbing wives and mothers of the men as they attempted to identify their loved ones among the dead. The Standard company did not have a regular list of its workmen and that added to the confusion of identification.

It was not until late in the day that the official tabulation of 17 known dead, three whose fate was known and nine rescued, was made.

Rescue crews said most of the dead were killed by the resultant gas, rather than by the explosion itself. Few bodies were mangled. Despite state and federal investigation, cause of the explosion remained unrevealed.
